Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Annual Reports of the Town Officers of Dublin, N. H: For Year Ending Feb; 15, 1894 In submitting our annual report, it gives us pleasure to be able to say that in most respects, the schools of the town have been as good during this year as during any like period in recent times. The teachers have been faithful and efficient, and on the whole, taking the year through, the schools have a high average in respect to order, deportment, regularity of attendance, the studies pursued, and the results achieved. At the outset it was decided that a new experiment should be tried; that, if possible, without increasing the expenditures, more weeks of schooling should be made accessible, at least to the more advanced pupils. To that end, during the second term but three of the six schools were to be in session at the same time, so that the older boys and girls might, by taking advantage of the two schools nearest them, have the benefit of two schools instead of one. The experiment has been fairly successful. The parents generally have grasped the situation, and have co-operated with the board to give their children the increased advantages offered them. Of course, the main benefits of the scheme are the economy in expenditure and multiplication of educational privileges. But there are also other advantages. One would be, if the plan were fully carried out, that we should be able to command the services of more experienced teachers, as only three teachers would be required during the year. Another advantage is that, by a little management, the scholars from one school can accompany the teachers...
