The new plant was heralded with a flourish of trumpets, and the expectations of the farmers of the North and South excited to the utmost by the enthusiasts and visionaries. Not only was syrup of the best quality promised, but sugar ad libitum. All the farmer had to do was to plant a few acres and he was to have syrup and sugar in proportion, and a ready market at high prices. Even the intrinsic value of the plant for forage, etc., was exaggerated beyond all moderation. Thousands alt over the country rushed into the cultivation of the new gold-bearing plant, and the result was sharp and decisive. With little or no knowledge of the plant itself, or the proper culture thereof, and totally without experience as to its manufacture into syrup and sugar, and with...
