Not illustrated. 1893 Excerpt: . . . position or hold pen properly while writing to sit in perfect position a moment without writing. The teacher should make herself a good penman by careful work, if not by faithful practice. Have pupils sit square to desk, both feet on the floor, body not touching desk, head erect, left hand above desk, bottom of copy book forming an angle of 38 degrees with edge of desk. Each pupil required to have pen-wipers and blotters. The copy books finished at the middle of the year are to be marked as to standing, taken home and shown to the parents and returned, to be kept by the teacher until the close of the year, when all copy books will be sent to parents with a blank, designed to be filled by parent acknowledging receipt of same--this to prevent some careless pupils destroying and scattering their...
