D-Flexure Location of insufficient parylene fill Leg Link Tether Figure 7. This photograph from the optical microscope shows insufficient parylene fill in the dark black areas near the D-Flexure-leg link four-trench junction. 3. 2 Parylene Adhesion and Etching Parylene adhesion to platinum and PZT was of initial concern as proper adhesion is critical to the success of the actuator joints. Parylene adhesion to platinum was tested utilizing a laminated composite consisting of silicon dioxide coated with a thin titanium layer and 85 nm of platinum. After patterning of the test actuators, parylene was deposited as with the silicon dioxide test actuators. The initial parylene coating on platinum proved successful with a uniform coating having the exact same appearance and characteristics as the coatings on silicon dioxide. In addition, a parylene coating was applied to a composite stack of SiO Ti Pt PZT Pt with 2 thicknesses similar to the actuators used in reference 1. Similar to the previous results, the parylene coating was uniform without defects or signs of delamination. Parylene etching has presented a problem in this process because the original methods of using Axcellis Downstream Asher resulted in more than 9 m of parylene undercut due to the isotropic nature of the etching process. This undercut is more than 3 m larger than the tolerable undercut in the design. For this reason, the etching process was changed to use an anisotropic RIE in order to prevent this excessive undercut (3). Using a Lam 590 parallel plate RIE system, the process showed considerable improvement with less than a 2 m undercut. However, the process...
