The famous guild of Antwerp painters admitted him with pride to be one of their company, and his pictures would be highly esteemed to this day but that they are commonly attributed to other masters, for he never signed his name to any of his works. Of the four Words by whose guidance he had tried to shape his life he had learned to condemn Glory and Power. Fortune and Art remained faithful to him, it is true; for just as the earth has no brightness in itself, but derives its light from the sun, so did Fortune and Art borrow all their splendor, charm, and power from Love. The reckless Electo, whose sword had raged in the fight, had now become a good-hearted neighbor in the fullest Christian sense of the word, and of his worthy master s teaching. Many a stranger has gazed with silent delight at a noble picture representing a handsome and thoughtfully happy mother leading her three blooming children toward an old man, who holds out his arms to them. The old man is Adam, the young mother is Ruth, the three children are the swordsmith s grandchildren. Ulrich Schwab painted it. Antonio Moor died not long after Ulrich s marriage, and a year later Sophonisba di Moncada came to Antwerp to visit the grave of the man she had so tenderly regarded. She had heard from Moor of his finding his old Madrid...
